by R.: W.: Claton D. Swain
DDGM Fulton-Montgomery District

Fellow Masons,

Wow, what a year! Hard to believe another Masonic year has gone by and the new Masters of each lodge have been elected and invested already. Before long all will be installed and new brothers will fill the other chairs of our lodges. I can only hope that all the brothers who take stations and places in their lodge realize this is a responsibility that cannot be taken lightly. Their enthusiasm and dedication will either make or break their lodge in the next year. I want to thank all who attended and participated in our district Investiture service at St. Patrick's, especially those who stepped in to help at the last minute.

As most of you know I am starting my fourth year as your District Deputy. Although it is hard to get motivated at times I pledge to each of you this year will be better than the last three (which I don't think were bad). I truly believe our district is doing well and the brothers who are involved are working hard to ensure this. Let's all keep up our motivation and push Masonry farther into the lives of those who are uninitiated but curious. The public who supports our efforts is where we will get our new members if we can simply show them that our Fraternity is for the good of all. Let's be sure to be the honest and courteous men we are at all times, especially when in the presence of the uninitiated.

In a few short weeks the Grand Master and our Grand Jurisdiction will be celebrating St. John's Day at the Utica Masonic Care Community. Open to all Masons, their family and friends, this weekend is when your state officers are rededicated in their positions as leaders of the craft. This year will be a special event; the care community will be dedicating the new Wiley Hall and "Great Lawn" for our use. A special party for all attendees will be held on Saturday evening with a full Bar-B-Que dinner for all to enjoy. Live entertainment, refreshments and of course great Masonry. I hope you all make the effort to attend this once in a life time event.

By the time you receive and read this newsletter our district would have held (on June 15th) the biggest and best Charity Golf Tournament it has ever held. I personally wish thank Brother Robert "Bob" Barr, R.: W.: Bob Lindholm, W.: William Dorn and W.: Jeff Lanfear who have worked hard to put this event together. Through their dedication and their leadership of the many volunteers it takes to put this event on our high school scholarship fund should be in very good shape. The raffle we held was also the biggest we have ever held. R.:W.: Bob Lindholm's gracious donation of the grand prize made this a raffle to be in and win. Most participants were surprised at the low cost for a chance to win some real money and a trip. Maybe next year we can try and top even this year's event.

Our Annual Lake George Dinner Cruise will be held near the August. For more details and reservations contact W.: Todd Payne at 863-4967 by July 20th. This annual event is always a fun time where we get to relax, enjoy the view and socialize with our brothers. Also in the past we were able to make new friends and greet brothers from other areas who are vacationing at the time.

At the end of August into September our district will again be working at the Fonda Fair producing the NYS Child ID for all who choose to participate. To assist in this monstrous event we have asked the DeMolay and Triangle to assist during the day. As we have learned over the last several years our efforts in this do not go unnoticed. R.:W.: David Saltsman, our district chairman, has been contacted by many other organizations to do a Child ID in their facility. He has scheduled these through out the summer in places such as the Bannertown Fair, Edinburg Fireman's Day and the first ever Fulton Montgomery Masonic Child ID Safety Day will be held the end of July at the Perth Volunteer Fire Departmen. Thanks to Brother David this most important "give back" to our communities is becoming very popular. I am sure he can use all the assistance you can give him. His phone number is 843-3445.

As our lodges go "dark" for the summer let us all remember that Masonry doesn't stop just because there is no meetings. It continues through every hour of every day throughout the summer and into our next Masonic Year. Brothers we are Masons once we have taken our obligations at the Sacred Altar. We are Masons when we live our daily lives and we are Masons when we are laid to rest underneath the "clods of the valley". For this I am truly happy I am a Mason.

Fraternally,

R.:W.: Clayton "Skip" Swain DDGM

Again this year, we are sponsoring a trip to Washington, D.C. on September 27 through September 30. We are chartering a Wade Tours coach which will be with us throughout our trip, and staying in the Americana Hotel, in Arlington, VA, which is a very convenient location, as it is close to the Crystal City Metro (subway) station, and a wide variety of dining and shopping choices. We will visit the Smithsonian Museums, the National Monuments, the awesome Udvar Hazy Air and Space Museum at Dulles Airport, the Changing of the Guard at Arlington National Cemetery, and opportunities for you to visit special places of your choice, such as the National Zoo, the Bureau of Engraving, the Holocaust Museum, the National Archives, and many other unique places. There will also be an opportunity to visit some very interesting Masonic related places in that area.

We will also stop at a place of special interest both on the way down on Thursday and while returning on Sunday. The itinerary is not complete at this time, but last year we toured West Point and spent time at The Inner Harbor of Baltimore on our return trip.

Letters will be going out to a large mailing list early in July with an invitation to sign up for this trip. The cost will be $350.00 each, based on double occupancy, and will include the bus and hotel. If you wish to be placed on this mailing list, call, email, or write to the address below.

BROTHERLY LOVE

Another evidence is love to the brethren. The Gospel breathes the spirit of love. Love is the fulfilling of its precepts, the evidence of its power, the pledge of its joys, and the ripe fruit of the Spirit. “A new commandment,” says our Lord to His disciples, “give I unto you, that you love one another” (John 13:34). “And this is his commandment, that we should believe on his Son, Jesus Christ, and love one another” (I John 3:23). This is emphatically a new commandment. It has a new object, not specified in the original law of love and obviously a different affection than that which is required in the moral law. Brotherly love is an affection which is limited to particular characters. There can be no doubt but the children of God are kindly affectionate toward all men because Christian benevolence runs parallel with rational being.

Genuine love to our neighbor is extended to all, according to their character and circumstances. It blesses those who curse us, and does good to those who hate us. This, however, is not the distinguishing nature of brotherly love. Brotherly love differs materially from the love of a general feeling of good will. It is the love of good men and for their godness only, and extends only to the followers of Christ. It is an affection which is directed toward the excellence of religion, and consists in a delight in holiness. Everyone that is of the truth, everyone that is born of God, of whatever condition, or nation under heaven, is to be loved with this affection. There is something in the character of every child of God that reflects the image of his heavenly Father, and it is this that attracts the eye and wins the heart. There is something which is amiable and lovely, and it is this loveliness that gives a spring to the affections and draws forth the hearts of God’s people toward God Himself.

The children of God are partakers of the Divine nature. From bearing the image of the earthly, they now bear the image of the heavenly. God has imparted to them a portion of His own loveliness; He has formed them new creatures; of His free and distinguishing grace, He has made them more excellent than their neighbors and hence they are lovely. 59 They are the excellent of the earth. God loves them, Christ loves them, the Holy Spirit loves them, angels love them, and they love each other. It is around those who the virtues cluster; from those who the graces of heaven are reflected, though shaded, and very often darkened by debasing and reproachful sins. Love to the brethren is also an affection which rests upon the union which believers sustain with Christ. The Lord Jesus, together with all true believers, forms one mystical body. Christ is the Head and they are the members. The same bond which unites believers to Christ binds them to each other. The love which is exercised toward the Head extends to the members. The union necessarily involves a union of affection. Those who love Christ love those who are like Him and those who are beloved by Him. Here all distinctions vanish. Name and nation, rank and party, are lost in the common character of believers, the common name of Christian. Jew and Gentile, bond and free, rich and poor, are one in Christ Jesus (Gal. 3:28).

They have one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God, and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in them all (Eph. 4:5- 6). Actuated by the same principles, cherishing the same hopes, animated by the same prospects, laboring under the same discouragements, having the same enemies to encounter, and the same temptations to resist, the same hell to shun, and the same heaven to enjoy, it is not strange that they should love one another sincerely and often with a pure heart fervently. There is a unity of design, a common interest in the objects of their pursuit which lays the foundation for mutual friendship and which cannot fail to excite the "harmony of souls." The glory of God is the grand object which commands their highest affections and which necessarily makes the interest of the whole the interest of each part, and the interest of each part the interest of the whole. There are no conflicting interests and there need be no jarring passions. In a common cause which in point of importance takes the place of every other and all others, the affections of the sanctified heart are one. The Lord Jesus has given peculiar emphasis to the duty of brotherly love, by constituting it the easy and decisive standards of true godliness. It is by this standard that His disciples are to judge of themselves. "We know," says an apostle, "that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren" (I John 3:14).

This is the criterion also by which He would have the world judge of the sincerity of their religion and the truth and divinity of His Gospel. "By this shall all men know that you are my disciples, if you have love one to another" (John 13:35). In that memorable prayer just before His death, He also prays for His disciples "that they all may be one, as you Father are in me and I in you, that they also may be one in us, that the world may believe that you has sent me” (John 17:21). With this standard before him, may not every man ascertain whether he is a child of God? The love of good men is not one of the native affections of the carnal mind. This cold, degenerate soil bears no such heavenly fruit. The affection which Christians exercise toward each other as Christians is the offspring of brighter worlds. It is a principle of celestial birth. Love is of God, and everyone that loves is born of God and knows God (I John 4:7).

It cannot be difficult to distinguish this Christian grace from a mere natural affection or mercenary or sectarian attachment. A parent may love his child, and a child his parent; a husband may love his wife and a wife her husband; and there may exist much and reciprocal affection between one man and another; while the personal religion of the party beloved constitutes none of the reasons of this affection. People may have been educated to esteem and respect pious men while this respectful sentiment falls far below the love of men as Christians and for their Christianity. Men may love Christians merely because they imagine that Christians love them. This, like every other affection that is purely selfish, is unworthy of the Christian name. They may love particular Christians because they are of their denomination and imbibe their sentiments. This too is nothing better than that friendship of the world which is enmity with God.

The obvious inquiry is: Do you love the people of God because they are the people of God? Because you discover in them the amiableness of that religion which is altogether lovely? Do you love them, not merely because they love you or have bestowed favors upon you; not because they are of your party, but because they bear the image of your heavenly Father? Do you love them for their love of God, their self-denial, their heavenliness, their usefulness in the world, their reproachless example, their faithfulness and love of duty? Do you love them when they reprove you, and when their example condemns you? And do you love them in proportion to the measure of these excellencies which they possess? Do you feel an interest in them and for them? Can you bear and forbear with them? Can you forget their infirmities, or do you rejoice to magnify them? Can you cast the mantle of charity over their sins and pray for them, and watch over them, and pity, and love them still? And can you feel thus and act thus toward the poorest and most despised of the flock and that because he is a Christian? If so, here is your encouragement “He that loves is born of God” (I John 4:7).

Antzelevitch Presented American Physiological Society Honor

Dr. Charles Antzelevitch, Executive Director and Director of Research of the Masonic Medical Research Laboratory (MMRL) was presented the Carl J. Wiggers Award of the American Physiological Society (APS) at the Experimental Biology Scientific Sessions in Washington, DC on May 1, 2007.

The prestigious Carl J. Wiggers Award is named after the founder of Circulation Research, a premier research journal, and is presented to a scientist who has made outstanding and lasting contributions to cardiovascular research.

Dr. Antzelevitch's consistent and cutting edge contributions to the body of scientific knowledge concerning heart disease, particularly in the field of cardiac electrophysiology and arrhythmias along with his deep and passionate involvement in training promising young scientists and physicians were cited as he received the Society's lifetime achievement award its highest honor from APS President, Dr. David Gutterman.

In his nomination letter Dr. Serge Sicouri of the MMRL said, "Dr. Antzelevitch is widely regarded as one of the finest scientists and experimental cardiac electrophysiologists in the world. His body of work has made an important impact on the progress of science and medicine, particularly in the areas involving the electrical function of the heart and factors that contribute to the development of abnormal rhythms of the heart including sudden cardiac death."

Dr. David Rosenbaum, Chief of Cardiology and Director of Heart and Vascular Research Center at Case Western Reserve University said in his recommendation letter, “Dr. Antzelevitch’s contributions are distinct and in many ways unique in the manner in which he has meticulously weaved together the fields of molecular, cellular, and clinical electrophysiology to derive novel scientific insights well ahead of others in the field. I cannot think of any other scientist who has so skillfully brought together apparently disparate disciplines of science to form unique, novel, and practical insights which have so importantly shaped cardiovascular scientific thinking.” He went on to say, “his discovery of what is now known as Phase 2 Reentry may well be the mechanism responsible in patients with Brugada syndrome. What I find so remarkable is the almost prophetic insight required to recognize the potential importance of a disease mechanism 20 years before the disease was identified. The ability to “connect the dots” in this manner required a special mind. A brilliance that is analogous to DaVinci’s invention of the parachute more than 100 years before man’s first flight. While many other investigators of Dr. Antzelevitch’s stature are often concerned with self-promotion, personal accomplishment, and attracting laurels, Antzelevitch is all about substance. In his uniquely reserved and humble style, Dr. Antzelevitch has unselfishly (and perhaps at times unknowingly) served as an outstanding role model for numerous junior faculty and trainees. He has carried the torch passed to him and has used it to illuminate the field of cardiovascular physiology, and ignite a passion for science in everyone he has touched along the way.”

The American Physiological Society (APS) is a nonprofit devoted to fostering education, scientific research, and dissemination of information in the physiological sciences. The Society was founded in 1887 has over 10,500 current members. APS is a member of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology (FASEB), a coalition of 18 independent societies that plays an active role in lobbying for the interests of biomedical scientists. The meeting brought together over 12,000 scientists and medical professionals from throughout the world.

The Masonic Medical Research Laboratory is a premier basic medical research institute and has served as one of the foremost international authorities on the mechanisms by which abnormal rhythms of the heart arise and the genetic factors involved in the development of these life-threatening arrhythmias. The MMRL is dedicated to improving the health and quality of life for all humankind. The Laboratory’s primary mission is to conduct high quality basic biomedical research aimed at generating knowledge and information necessary for development of the medical cures and treatments of tomorrow. The Laboratory is also committed to providing education and training to basic scientists and clinical researchers who would perpetuate and extend the fight against disease.
